Assignment 10 - Cell Communication: Theory, Models

1. What is a signal transduction pathway? Give an example.

A signal transduction pathway is a series of events that starts with a signal (ligand) binding to a receptor, which then triggers a cascade of intracellular events leading to a specific cellular response.

Example: A signal transduction pathway for a growth factor receptor (EGFR) involves the binding of a growth factor (ligand) to the extracellular domain of the receptor, which then triggers the activation of the intracellular domain. This leads to the recruitment of various signaling molecules, including Ras, Raf, and MEK, which ultimately lead to the activation of ERK. The activated ERK then enters the nucleus and phosphorylates various transcription factors, leading to the expression of specific genes.

2. What three general mechanisms are an example of a signal transduction pathway?

Three general mechanisms are an example of a signal transduction pathway: 1) Receptor tyrosine kinases (RTKs), 2) G-protein coupled receptors (GPCRs), and 3) Ion channels. RTKs are activated by the binding of a ligand to the extracellular domain, which causes the receptor to dimerize and activate. GPCRs are activated by the binding of a ligand to the extracellular domain, which causes the receptor to activate a G-protein. Ion channels are activated by the binding of a ligand to the extracellular domain, which causes the channel to open and allow ions to flow through.
