Developing Skills for Decision Making and Innovation Gerritdina Kneppers, 2014-11-01 Problem solving consists of using generic or ad hoc methods in an orderly manner for finding solutions to problems. Some of the problem solving techniques developed and used in artificial intelligence, computer science, engineering, mathematics, medicine, etc. are related to mental problem solving techniques studied in psychology. The term problem solving is used in many disciplines, sometimes with different perspectives and often with different terminologies. For instance, it is a mental process in psychology and a computerized process in computer science. Problems can also be classified into two different types: ill defined and well defined, from which appropriate solutions are to be made. Ill defined problems are those that do not have clear goals, solution paths, or expected solutions. Well defined problems have specific goals, clearly defined solution paths, and clear expected solutions. These problems also allow for more initial planning than ill defined problems. Being able to solve problems sometimes involves dealing with pragmatics, logic, and semantics, interpretation of the problem. The ability to understand what the goal of the problem is and what rules could be applied represent the key to solving the problem. Sometimes the problem requires some abstract thinking and coming up with a creative solution.

Smart Decisions Thomas N. Martin, 2016-04-29 Today's world is complex and getting more so each day. Huge multinational corporations, international crisis, and fast breaking events require most people to make decisions on a daily basis without the tools to understand the long term impact that today's decision might create. Because most people have never really been trained in how to make important complex decisions, most people rely on experience and gut reaction, which is okay for many decisions but not okay for decision that will have meaningful impact on organizations and individuals. Decision makers need to develop the art and science of strategic decision making. Here Professor Thomas Martin explains the need for decision makers to modify their thinking about how they deal with acquiring and analyzing information in each of the decision making process steps. This approach requiring thinking modification will lengthen the process, make it more complex, and to some more arduous, but the comprehensiveness of the new thinking approach should lead to improved and more effective decision making. In this book, Dr. Martin presents a thinking modification framework that asserts that in the decision making process there are three situational states: a current state, future state, and a transitional state that one must deliberate in finding a solution. For each of these situational states, Martin develops an identical five step process to determine the best decision to make. The steps of this process include: Change, Needing, Situational Analysis, Challenge Framing, Causal Analysis, Generating Solution Ideas, Choosing a Solution Set, Implementation, and Aftermath Planning. This book will appeal to decision makers, leaders, and students of management who want a specific framework that details the process behind making strategic, well informed decisions.
