Gliner, George Arthur Morgan, 2000 The authors of this unique text found that while most students can crunch the numbers quite easily and accurately with a calculator or computer many have trouble seeing the big picture or seeing how research questions and design influence data analysis As a result the authors developed a semantically consistent framework that integrates traditional research approaches experimental quasi experimental comparative into three basic kinds of research questions difference associational and descriptive which in turn lead to three kinds or groups of statistics with the same names This text helps students become good consumers of research by demonstrating how to analyze and evaluate research articles offers a number of summarizing diagrams and tables that clarify confusing or difficult to learn topics points out the value of qualitative research and how it should lead quantitative researchers to be more flexible divides all quantitative research questions into five logically consistent categories that help students select appropriate statistics and understand their cause and effect and classifies design into three major types between groups within subjects and mixed groups and shows that although these three types use the same general type of statistics e.g. ANOVA the specific statistics in between groups design are different from those in within subjects and mixed groups

The Psychologically Literate Citizen Dana Dunn, 2013-01-01 The concepts of psychological literacy and the psychologically literate citizen promise to invigorate a new global approach to psychology education. They pose a basic question: What attributes and capabilities should undergraduate psychology majors acquire? Many psychological organizations have defined psychological literacy by guidelines and lists of student learning outcomes, but although psychology educators across the globe have been working towards helping students to acquire these attributes over the past 50 years, educators have only recently explicitly delineated attributes and learning outcomes and sought to develop appropriate learning, teaching, and assessment strategies, including whole program approaches. The contributors to this volume argue that psychological literacy is the most important outcome of an undergraduate psychology education and that psychologically literate citizens use their knowledge of psychology to problem solve in ethical and socially responsible ways that directly benefit their communities. In this book, a rich variety of international perspectives contribute to the development of the two key concepts of psychological literacy and the psychologically literate citizen. Authors provide practical guidance for classroom psychology educators as well as curriculum developers and reviewers. Ultimately, they make the case for a paradigm shift in psychology education.

Research in IT for Beginners Mohammad Yasser Chuttur, 2021-01-14 The book Research in IT for Beginners is especially intended for undergraduate and graduate students who have no experience conducting academic research in the field of Information Technology (IT) and who wish to have a quick overview of the different stages of the research process. At the end of each chapter, students will also find a summary and review questions that help focus on the main points covered. Overall, this book can be used as an instructional material for a course in Research Methodology or it can be used on its own as a referencing material when embarking on a research journey.
