Death of

Civilization Nathan Hale,2013-02-20 Six years ago Civilization died under a hail of kinetic energy weapons leaving the stunned survivors around the world to struggle through five years of almost continuous winter Most people starved to death many resorted to cannibalism but eventually starved to death anyway Only a few survivors were prepared enough strong enough or ruthless enough to survive the unending worldwide cold Nobody survived unscathed Now in the sixth summer after the war the sun has reappeared the snow has departed and the weather appears to have become more normal After giving profound thanks to God for the first time in years the prepared survivors have been able to sow their fields and allow their herds to grow while they prepare for what they have little doubt is coming What is coming are the other survivors the ones that survived mainly by using human beings as cattle For the most part they have no cattle their fields are planted with old hybrid seed that will barely produce food and then only once But what they do have is an abiding faith in Allah the satisfaction of finally having an American Caliphate a warrior culture and weapons many weapons The only way the Caliphate can grow and prosper is for them to take for themselves what the survivalists have The only way for the survivalists to survive is to protect what they have and they are more than willing to do so The survivalists are also well armed and the General had hand picked most of his men so they aren't teary eyed turn the other cheek Christians but are warriors also Civilization has ended but the fight for survival continues Only all four of the horsemen of the Apocalypse have been riding throughout the world for the past six years and shall continue to do so Conquest War Famine and Death now have a new deadly friend Pestilence only their new friend appears to be man made and redefines the word deadly The saga continues The survivors are also working desperately to stave off a new dark age while turning the light of civilization back on Most cities are now huge lakes the coasts have been stripped to bedrock and even the large amount of supplies the survivalists had stored is running short They are also in a race against the Caliphate to secure whatever resources still exist that will help them to reclaim their nascent civilization Only the Caliphate wants more much more This is the time that Allah told the Prophet about This is their opportunity to not only become the dominant religion in the world but the only religion They have the men the weapons and the will to dominate The only thing standing in their way is a paltry few citizen survivors With the will of Allah on their side how can they lose Of course those paltry few citizen survivors have an entirely different opinion about the matter Death of Civilization; Disaster Nathan Hale,2015-12-15 After their defeat in southern Kentucky the barbarians have simply disappeared only after fifty years the war drums are beating loudly within the Caliphate But life within the Association goes on New settlements are created trade is flourishing roads are being built and the railroads are quickly following civilizations return Then after disappearing for years the barbarian hordes launch a surprise attack on the very heartland of the Association that are coupled with major assaults on the outlying settlements Settlements fall the major industrial city of Forest in burning and then Mother Nature adds to the devastation with wave after wave of deadly earthquakes that are caused by the continued slow slippage of the Earth's crust over the mantle. The proud Association is quickly brought to its knees as its major industries are destroyed and only the heroic efforts of the citizens and their military stand between the barbarians and their total destruction. History of the Michigan State Society, 1896-1942 National Society, United States Daughters of 1812. Michigan State Society, 1942 Literary News, 1886 Decolonizing the Diet Gideon Mailer, Nicola Hale, 2018-03-22 Decolonizing the Diet challenges the common claim that Native American communities were decimated after 1492 because they lived in Virgin Soils that were biologically distinct from those in the Old World. Comparing the European transition from Paleolithic hunting and gathering with Native American subsistence strategies before and after 1492, the book offers a new way of understanding the link between biology, ecology, and history. Synthesizing the latest work in the science of nutrition, immunity, and evolutionary genetics with cutting edge scholarship on the history of indigenous North America, Decolonizing the Diet highlights a fundamental model of human demographic destruction: human populations have been able to recover from mass epidemics within a century, whatever their genetic heritage. They fail to recover from epidemics when their ability to hunt, gather, and farm nutritionally dense plants and animals is diminished by war, colonization, and cultural destruction. The history of Native America before and after 1492 clearly shows that biological immunity is contingent on historical context, not least in relation to the protection or destruction of long evolved nutritional building blocks that underlie human immunity. The Publishers Weekly, 1897
