David Cox Drawings Colour Plates:

David Cox: Drawings Maria Peitcheva, 2015-12-03 David Cox was an English landscape painter one of the most important members of the Birmingham School of landscape artists and an early precursor of impressionism He is considered one of the greatest English landscape painters and a major figure of the Golden age of English watercolor Although most popularly known for his works in watercolor he also painted over 300 works in oil towards the end of his career By the 1840s Cox alongside Peter De Wint and Copley Fielding had become recognised as one of the leading figures of the English landscape watercolour style of the first half of the 19th century This judgement was complicated by reaction to the rougher and bolder style of Cox's later Birmingham work which was widely ignored or condemned A group of young artists working in Cox's watercolour style emerged well before his death including William Bennett David Hall McKewan and Cox's son David Cox Jr

Drawings of David Cox A. J. Finberg, 2021-03-27 Excerpt The greatest artists have expressed themselves so completely in their works that the story of their lives adds little or nothing to our knowledge of their personality We know very little about the life of Turner almost as little indeed as we know of Shakespeare's but in neither case do we seem to have missed anything that would add to our comprehension or enjoyment of their work With Turner as with Shakespeare his art was the perfect organ of his spirit His pictures enshrine more of the real personality of the artist than even a biographer of genius with unlimited opportunities could tell us But though this is almost invariably true of the greatest artists it is not true of all artists It is hardly the case with David Cox His hampered thwarted art is indeed replete with glimpses and hints of the personality behind it but without a commentary it is not very eloquent or very likely to arrest attention The artist's life furnishes the needed commentary The beautiful simplicity and naiveté of the man's character the mean circumstances in which his life was cast the fortitude industry and manliness with which he triumphed over his difficulties these things explain much that seems at first sight futile in his art and colour even his worst failures with a glow of purely human sympathy And the works of his old age his most eloquent and self-subsistent productions i.e. the works of Cox that stand least in need of a commentary these lose nothing of their compelling power from the spectator's consciousness of the difficulties through which the artist's spirit had to struggle towards self-realisation and expression
