Design Like You Give A Damn Architectural Responses To Humanitarian Crises:

Design Like You Give a Damn Architecture for Humanity (Organization), 2006 Edited by Cameron Sinclair and Kate Stohr Design Like You Give a Damn Deborah Aaronson, 2006 Hijacking Sustainability Adrian Parr, 2012-02-10

How the sustainability movement has been co-opted from ecobranding by Wal Mart to the greening of the American military. The idea of sustainability has gone mainstream. Thanks to Prius driving movie stars, it's even hip. What began as a grassroots movement to promote responsible development has become a bullet point in corporate ecobranding strategies. In Hijacking Sustainability, Adrian Parr describes how this has happened, how the goals of an environmental movement came to be mediated by corporate interests, government, and the military. Parr argues that the more popular sustainable development becomes, the more commodified it becomes, the more mainstream culture embraces the sustainability movement's concern over global warming and poverty, the more sustainability culture advances the profit-maximizing values of corporate capitalism. And the more issues of sustainability are aligned with those of national security, the more military values are conflated with the goals of sustainable development. Parr looks closely at five examples of the hijacking of sustainability: corporate image greening, Hollywood activism, gated communities, the greening of the White House, and the incongruous efforts to achieve a sustainable army. Parr then examines key challenges to sustainability: waste disposal, disaster relief, and environmental refugees, slum development, and poverty. Sustainability, Parr says, offers an alternative narrative of the collective good, an idea now compromised and endangered by corporate, military, and government interests.

Reading the Architecture of the Underprivileged Classes Nnamdi Elleh, 2016-04-01

The expansion of cities in the late C19th and middle part of the C20th in the developing and the emerging economies of the world has one major urban corollary: it caused the proliferation of unplanned parts of the cities that are identified by a plethora of terminologies such as bidonville, favela, ghetto, informal settlements, and shantytown. Often the dwellings in such settlements are described as shacks, architecture of necessity, and architecture of everyday experience in the modern and the contemporary metropolis. This volume argues that the types of structures and settlements built by people who do not have access to architectural services in many cities in the developing parts of the world evolved simultaneously with the types of buildings that are celebrated in architecture textbooks as modernism. It not only shows how architects can learn from traditional or vernacular dwellings in order to create habitations for the people of low income groups in public housing scenarios but also demonstrates how the architecture of the economically underprivileged classes goes beyond culturally inspired tectonic interpretations of vernacular traditions by architects for high profile clients. Moreover, the essays explore how the resourceful dwellings of the underprivileged inhabitants of the great cities in developing parts of the world pioneered certain concepts of modernism and contemporary design practices such as sustainable and deconstructivist design. Using projects from Africa, Asia, South and Central America, as well as Austria and the USA, this volume interrogates and brings to the attention of academics, students, and practitioners of architecture the deliberate disqualification of the modern architecture produced by the urban poor in different parts of the world
