Jacobs, 2021-10-25 This book provides a multidisciplinary analysis of the potential conflict between a government's duty to protect children and a parent's right to raise children in a manner they see fit Using philosophical bioethical and legal analysis the author engages with key scholars in pediatric decision making and individual and religious rights theory Going beyond the parent child dyad the author is deeply concerned both with the interests of the broader society and with the appropriate limits of government interference in the private sphere The text offers a balance of individual and population interests maximizing liberty but safeguarding against harm Bioethics and law professors will therefore be able to use this text for both a foundational overview as well as specific subject level analysis Clinicians such as pediatricians and gynecologists as well as policy makers can use this text to achieve balance between these often competing claims The book is written by a physician with practical and theoretical knowledge of the subject and deep sympathy for the parental and family perspectives As such the book proposes a new way of evaluating parental and state interventions in children's healthcare a refreshing approach and a useful addition to the literature Child Health Nursing Sanjeev Singh, 2009 Child Health USA, 2005 The effect of insurance enrollment on maternal and child health care utilization Gajate-Garrido, Gissele, Ahiadeke, Clement, 2015-12-30 Access to and use of health services are concerns in poor countries If implemented correctly health insurance may help solve these concerns Due to selection and omitted variable bias however it is difficult to determine whether joining an insurance scheme improves medical care seeking behaviors This paper uses representative data for the whole country of Ghana and an instrumental variable approach to estimate the causal impact on healthcare use of participating in Ghana's National Health Insurance Scheme Idiosyncratic variations in membership rules at the district level provide exogenous variation in enrollment The instrument is the existence of nonstandard verification methods to allow enrollment of children Using the 2008 Ghana Demographic and Health Survey and a census of all district insurance offices this paper finds that insurance membership increases the probability of 1 seeking higher quality but no greater quantity of maternal services and 2 parents becoming more active users of child curative care Instrumental variable estimates are larger than ordinary least squares ones indicating that compliers have much higher returns to being insured than the average participant Results are robust to several validity checks this paper shows that the instrument is indeed idiosyncratic and proves that government officials did not establish less cumbersome membership rules in districts with worse initial indicators
