

A Toss of the Dice - A Population Simulation

Introduction:

Populations can sometimes be described by a single number, such as the average height of Americans, by representing the distribution that describes the population's size. Most populations, however, are not.

In this simulation, you'll use a simple random sample of 100 people to estimate the distribution of heights in a population. You'll compare your estimate to the actual distribution of heights in a population.

Objectives

1. Understand the concept of a population.
2. Understand the concept of a sample.
3. Use a simple random sample to estimate the distribution of heights in a population.
4. Compare the estimated distribution to the actual distribution of heights in a population.
5. Understand the concept of a simple random sample.

Simulation of a Simple Random Sample

1. Population: The population is the set of all possible outcomes of a random process. In this case, the population is the set of all possible heights of a person.
2. Sample: A sample is a subset of the population. In this case, the sample is the set of heights of 100 people.
3. Simple Random Sample: A simple random sample is a sample in which every member of the population has an equal chance of being selected.
4. Estimate: An estimate is a number that is used to describe a population. In this case, the estimate is the average height of the 100 people in the sample.
5. Comparison: The comparison is the difference between the estimated distribution and the actual distribution. In this case, the comparison is the difference between the estimated average height and the actual average height.
6. Conclusion: The conclusion is the final result of the simulation. In this case, the conclusion is the estimated average height of the population.

Simulation Results

Dice Lab On Population Growth:

Global Science John W. Christensen,2000 Dr. Calhoun's Mousery Lee Alan Dugatkin,2024-10-03 A bizarre and compelling biography of a scientist and his work using rodent cities to question the potential catastrophes of human overpopulation It was the strangest of experiments What began as a utopian environment where mice had sumptuous accommodations had all the food and water they could want and were free from disease and predators turned into a mouse hell Science writer and animal behaviorist Lee Alan Dugatkin introduces readers to the peculiar work of rodent researcher John Bumpass Calhoun In this enthralling tale Dugatkin shows how an ecologist turned psychologist turned futurist became a science rock star embedded in the culture of the 1960s and 1970s As interest grew in his rodent cities Calhoun was courted by city planners and his work was reflected in everything from Tom Wolfe s hard hitting writing to the children s book Mrs Frisby and the Rats of NIMH He was invited to meetings with the Royal Society and the pope and taken seriously when he proposed a worldwide cybernetic brain a decade before others made the internet a reality Readers see how Calhoun s experiments rodent apartment complexes like Mouse Universe 25 led to his concept of behavioral sinks with real effects on public policy discussions Overpopulation in Calhoun s mouse and rat complexes led to the loss of sex drive the absence of maternal care and a class of automatons that included the beautiful ones who spent their time grooming themselves while shunning socialization Calhoun and those who followed his work saw the collapse of this mouse population as a harbinger of the ill effects of an overpopulated human world Drawing on previously unpublished archival research and interviews with Calhoun s family and former colleagues Dugatkin offers a riveting account of an intriguing scientific figure Considering Dr Calhoun s experiments he explores the changing nature of scientific research and delves into what the study of animal behavior can teach us about ourselves Exploring Physical Anthropology: Lab Manual and Workbook, 4e Suzanne E

Resources Abstracts ,1985 Selected Water Resources Abstracts ,1985 New Trends in Table Olive Fermentation, 2nd Edition Joaquín Bautista-Gallego,Francisco Noé Arroyo-López,Albert Bordons,Rufino Jiménez-Díaz,2020-03-27 Table olives are a traditional fermented vegetable with many centuries of history particularly in the Mediterranean basin where this food has had a great influence on the culture and diet of many countries Moreover this fermented food is prepared with fruits obtained from cultivated Olea europaea subsp. europaea var. europaea trees and has been expanded for many countries all over the world. At present the table olive is one of the major fermented vegetables with an overall production above 2 500 000 tons/year. Thus the table olive industry is increasingly demanding new biotechnological approaches, sensory characteristics and differentiation of the products. So scientists have to focus on solving problems and providing new tools in this fermented food process. In recent years there is an increased interest in different nutritional and microbial aspects related to table olives. During the last five years new fields have been implemented or developed such as new probiotic strains to produce an enriched product, study of pathogen survival, NaCl content reduction, microbial resistance to stress conditions, microbial biofilms, predictive microbiology, use of NGS and metagenomics, use of bioactive compounds derived from table olive processing and the treatment of effluents generated during olive processing. The diversity of research displayed in this Research Topic demonstrates the important potential of this product and its impact on the fermented vegetables economy.
