

DERMATOLOGY

Dermatology is defined as a subdivision of medicine with a specific focus on the conditions of the skin, hair, nail, and sweat glands along with their related diseases. Additional branches of dermatology include, but are not limited to, cosmetic dermatology (which has a focus on elective procedures such as laser hair removal, fillers, and sclerotherapy) and immunodermatology (which studies conditions of the skin caused by immune system problems inclusive of lupus).

Branches of Dermatology:

- Cosmetic dermatology
- Dermopathology
- Immunodermatology
- Moh's surgery
- Pediatric dermatology

At some point in a person's life, it becomes important to visit a dermatologist for issues ranging from dry skin, to severe sun burns, to pre-cancerous moles.

Dermatology Philosophy:

Good health is not simply the absence of disease but also the promotion of a physical, emotional, mental and social equilibrium. Our goal in the dermatology department is to provide each patient that enters the door with the highest quality medical care possible, a cheerful greeting, a warm smile and an encouraging atmosphere. It takes an exceptionally caring, understanding, perceptive, and goal-oriented individual to succeed in dermatology, as the learning process is endless. The qualities above are all evident in our staff of Patient Service Representatives (PSR), Medical Assistants (MA), Licensed Vocational Nurses (LVN), and Medical Records personnel.

Philosophy of Cedars-Sinai Medical Group:

Cedars-Sinai Medical Group is dedicated to providing the highest quality patient care and superior service in an environment that promotes mutual respect, trust, accountability and teamwork among our physicians, staff and patients.
