Accelerations and Circular Motion

Newton's second law, and FMA, tells us that net force and its corresponding acceleration are always in the same direction. (Only force-related accelerations are vector quantities.) But force and acceleration are not always in the direction of velocity (another vector).

1. You're in a car at a traffic light. The light turns green and the driver "rips on the gas."

- Your body lurches forward (not at all backward).
- The car accelerates forward (not at all backward).
- The force on the car acts forward (not at all backward).

The sketch shows the top view of the car. Note the directions of the velocity and acceleration vectors.

2. You're driving along and approach a stop sign. The driver rips on the brakes.

- Your body lurches backward (not at all forward).
- The car accelerates backward (not at all forward).
- The force on the car acts backward (not at all forward).

The sketch shows the top view of the car. Draw vectors for velocity and acceleration.

3. You continue driving, and round a sharp curve to the left at constant speed.

- Your body lurches backward (not at all forward).
- The direction of the car's acceleration is backward (not at all forward).
- The force on the car acts backward (not at all forward).

Draw vectors for velocity and acceleration of the car.

4. In general, the directions of force and acceleration, and therefore the directions of force and force, are the same (not related) opposite.

- The whirling stone's direction of motion keeps changing.
 - If it moves faster, its direction changes faster (slower).
 - This indicates that as speed increases, acceleration increases (decreases) (stays the same).
- Consider whirling the stone on a shorter string—that is, of smaller radius.
 - For a given speed, the rate that the stone changes direction is less faster (like same).
 - This indicates that as the radius decreases, acceleration decreases (increases) (stays the same).

Ensure students are comfortable with a range of question formats: multi-step mathematics problems and higher-level questions. Help students prepare for tests measuring NYS Next Generation Learning Standards. Writing on the Wall Philip Van Notten, 2005. Although the significance of 9/11 is subject to debate, it is symbolic of a general sentiment of discontinuity whereby society is vulnerable to undefined and highly disruptive events. Recent catalysts of this sentiment are eye-catching developments such as the SARS Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome and bird flu outbreaks, the Enron and Parmalat scandals, political assassinations in Sweden and the Netherlands, regime changes in Iraq and Afghanistan, and terrorist attacks in Bali, Istanbul, Madrid, and various parts of the Middle East. However, recent discontinuities should not be seen as evidence that discontinuities occur more frequently now than they did before. Looking back in history, we see that disruptive processes are common. For example, 25 years ago, few Europeans would have predicted the upcoming upheavals on their own continent: the collapse of communism, Berlin as the capital of a reunited Germany, the wars in the former Yugoslavia, the single European currency, and the near doubling of the number of European Union member states. Changes elsewhere have been no less discontinuous and unforeseen: the fall of the Asian tigers, the emergence of the Internet and mobile telecommunication, and the presidency of Nelson Mandela. Societal discontinuity is a relatively new area of concern in policy development. Since the 1970s, the consideration of change and discontinuity has gained some ground over predictive forecasting, which tended to reason from continuous developments and linear processes. Rather than making forecasting the future, it has become popular to use scenarios as a manner to consider several possible futures. Scenarios are coherent descriptions of alternative hypothetical futures that reflect different perspectives on past, present, and future developments, which can serve as a basis for action. Scenario development aims to combine analytical knowledge with creative thinking in an effort to capture a wide range of possible future developments in a limited number of outlooks. Scenario development assumes that the future is uncertain and the directions in which current developments might range from the conventional to the revolutionary. In theory, scenario development is a way to consider future discontinuity. However, there are indications that the theoretical promise is not reflected in scenario practice Research has shown that scenarios do not consider the idea of discontinuity as a matter of course In our research we found that a scenario study would benefit from efforts to create and foster a culture of curiosity for exploring the future and the possible discontinuities rather than simply commissioning a scenario study to provide insights about the future Only then can one read the writing on the wall of future developments Discoveries Houghton Mifflin Company,1988-03 Macroengineering John Darabaris,2006-04-18 Macroengineering An Environmental Restoration Management Process provides a comprehensive understanding of all the technical cost and regulatory issues that an environmental project manager would potentially face on a large scale environmental restoration project The author addresses unique technical issues encountered during DOD and DOE environmental cleanup efforts such as radionuclide contamination unexploded ordinance heavy metals and other common contaminants Referencing the most recent regulations and practices in environmental cleanup projects the book also includes useful charts and tables and serves both as a classroom text and a professional reference 1974 Annual Supplement Joan Schmitz Bergholt,2013-12-21

Embracing the Track of Expression: An Mental Symphony within Concept Development Practice Page 20

In some sort of used by monitors and the ceaseless chatter of immediate communication, the melodic beauty and mental symphony created by the published term often disappear in to the back ground, eclipsed by the constant noise and distractions that permeate our lives.
