Cyber Threats From China Russia And Iran Protecting American Critical Infrastructure:

Cyber Threats from China, Russia, and Iran Committee on Homeland Security House of Representatives, Createspace Independent Pub, 2014-01-17 Today's hearing is timely and very relevant. We are examining the cyber threat today that is posed by nation states namely China, Russia, and Iran. I focus on the nation state aspect of this threat because it represents a new battlefield in state relationships and one in which we must prepare accordingly. There have been significant developments in the cyber domain highlighted by the fact that the U.S. Government has finally begun to name the nation states most responsible for cyber attacks against the United States. Tom Donilon, the President's National security adviser, outed China as the place where cyber intrusions are emanating on an unprecedented scale. The annual threat assessment by the United States intelligence community delivered to Congress, Director of National Intelligence James Clapper named cyber as the top threat to the United States National security. This represents a major shift in the threat assessment by the United States intelligence community and makes our work on this committee even more important. Cyber Threats from China, Russia, and Iran United States Congress, 2017-10 Cyber threats from China, Russia, and Iran protecting American critical infrastructure hearing before the Subcommittee on Cybersecurity Infrastructure Protection and Security Technologies of the Committee on Homeland Security House of Representatives One Hundred Thirteenth Congress first session March 20, 2013

The Rise of China and International Law Congyan Cai, 2019 The rise of China signals a new chapter in international relations and international law. How China interacts with the international legal order, namely how China utilizes international law to facilitate and justify its rise and how international law is relied upon to engage a rising China, has invited growing debate among academics and those in policy circles. It approaches different angles of cybersecurity regulation showing the importance of dichotomies as state vs market, public vs private and international vs domestic. It critically analyses two dominant Internet regulation models labelled as market oriented and state oriented. It pays particular attention to the role of private actors in cyber governance and contrasts the different motivations and modus operandi of different actors and states including in the domains of public private partnerships international data transfers regulation of international trade and foreign direct investments The book also examines key global within the United Nations and regional efforts to regulate cybersecurity and explains the limits of domestic and international law in tackling cyberattacks Finally it demonstrates how geopolitical considerations and different approaches to human rights shape cybersecurity governance     National Cybersecurity and Critical Infrastructure Protection Act of 2014 United States.
