Intensely Human Margaret Humphreys, 2008-03-05 This informative look at the causes of high mortality rates among black Civil War soldiers gives readers some insight into current health disparities JAMA Black soldiers in the American Civil War were far more likely to die of disease than were white soldiers In Intensely Human historian Margaret Humphreys explores why this uneven mortality occurred and how it was interpreted at the time In doing so she uncovers the perspectives of mid nineteenth century physicians and others who were eager to implicate the so called innate inferiority of the black body In the archival collections of the U S Sanitary Commission Humphreys found evidence that the high death rate among black soldiers resulted from malnourishment inadequate shelter and clothing inferior medical attention and assignments to hazardous environments While some observant physicians of the day attributed the black soldiers high mortality rate to these circumstances few medical professionals on either side of the conflict were prepared to challenge the biological evidence of white superiority Humphreys shows how despite sympathetic and responsible physicians efforts to expose the truth the stereotype of black biological inferiority prevailed during the war and after Clinical Virology Douglas D.
