which left compensation as the main response and a widespread loss centred interpretation of the Aristotelian theory of corrective justice explain but do not justify the difficulties encountered by modern attempts to account for restitutionary damages Mistakes in the classification of this institution have complicated the picture To overcome some of these problems this study considers the basic structure of restitutionary damages from different angles In part one the topic is analysed from a comparative perspective Although the focus remains on English law the German the Italian and the Roman jurisdictions provide research data which in part two support the development of a theory of restitution for wrongs as corrective justice common issues The legal systems discussed include principally in the common law those of Great Britain the United States and India and in the civil law the private law systems of Belgium and France Germany Italy and Spain Professor Hyland also serves a critique of the dominant method in the field which is a form of functionalism based on what is called the praesumptio similitudinis namely the axiom that once legal doctrine is stripped away developed legal systems tend to reach similar practical results His study demonstrates to the contrary that legal systems actually differ not only in their approach and conceptual structure but just as much in the results
