- ...the first step was to define the objectives of the study. The objectives were to determine the prevalence of the disease, to identify the risk factors, and to evaluate the effectiveness of the intervention. The study was conducted in a community-based setting, and the results were compared to those of a similar study conducted in a hospital setting. The results showed that the prevalence of the disease was significantly higher in the community-based setting than in the hospital setting. The risk factors identified were age, sex, and occupation. The intervention was found to be effective in reducing the prevalence of the disease.
