The Brain: A Control Panel

The brain is an organ that controls almost everything that the human body does. It is made up of two main parts: the cerebrum and the cerebellum. The cerebrum is the part of the brain that controls voluntary actions. The cerebellum is the part of the brain that controls involuntary actions.

Voluntary movements include things like walking, talking, and using your hands. Involuntary movements include things like breathing, digestion, and heartbeat.

The largest part of the brain is the cerebrum. It controls voluntary movements, such as walking, talking, and using your hands. The cerebellum is the part of the brain that controls involuntary movements, such as breathing, digestion, and heartbeat.

The cerebrum is divided into two halves called hemispheres. Each hemisphere is divided into four areas called lobes. Each lobe has many different functions. For example, the frontal lobe is responsible for planning and decision-making. The parietal lobe is responsible for processing sensory information. The temporal lobe is responsible for processing sound and language. The occipital lobe is responsible for processing visual information.
