Critical Realism and Housing Research Julie Lawson, 2013-01-11 Since the nineteenth century various housing solutions have evolved such as sprawling Australian home ownership and compact Dutch social rental housing This phenomenon cannot be adequately explained with simple descriptions of key events politics and housing outcomes Critical Realism and Housing Studies pushes debate forward arguing that a new ontological perspective is required to address fundamental issues in housing and comparative research This book is clearly organized into three parts which evaluate ontological and methodological alternatives for comparative housing research provide two historical case studies inspired by critical realist ontology compare the causal tendencies that explain diverging housing pathways in Australia and the Netherlands Lawson proposes that we turn to critical realism for the solution From this perspective the causal tendencies of complex open and structured housing phenomena are highlighted With this insight we are able to extract the key social arrangements which promote different housing solutions from the historical case studies Social arrangements which are found to influence alternative pathways in housing history concern the property rights circuit of savings and investment as well as labour and welfare relations As they develop differently over time and space they affect where when and how housing solutions develop processes being described may nonetheless resonate closely with the experience of healthcare practitioners at other hospices both within and without the UK The work examines themes and ideas that hospice and palliative care practitioners as well as those involved or interested more broadly in end of life issues may find relevant It is argued that differential morphogenesis can be identified between structures social and cultural and agents individual and group at an independent healthcare charity in southern England A Hospice in Change connects theory and philosophy with concrete research practice to provide a worked example of Margaret Archer's realist social theory
