Coltrane's God Donald Levering, 2015 Poetry Music Runner Up for Poetry in the 2016 New England Book Festival Awards Love of music and honor for musicians are the heart of COLTRANE S GOD Donald Levering s 7th full length collection of poems In his joyful tribute to people s language of emotion country blues and jazz accompany life s knocks and peaks Among the players are a street busker wailing laments in the rain a choir boy whose voice is changing an itinerant fiddler at a WPA work camp romping barrelhouse piano players and a woman singing scat in a tram tunnel A prose opening section humorously recalls the author s childhood introduction to music in the context of his family and the era One of the book s motifs is ear worms music that gets stuck in your head ranging from Mozart to The Bristol Stomp to Oliver Nelson s scales of braided horns In the title poem the voice of the god of John Coltrane admonishes the famed sax player to blister their ears with arpeggios As in his other books Levering s prosody is delightfully musical These are poems of homage not just to musicians from city street buskers and country fiddle players to jazz greats and classical composers but music itself as nourishment and companion to the imagination Levering s devotion is evident in the eclecticism and easy knowledge his poems convey And they evoke that extra ingredient that can make us stop in our tracks when hearing an almost forgotten song nostalgia the interweaving of song into the larger fabric of one s life Through imagery and finely tuned language Levering has managed to re create his experience of music into experience one can access as easily as notes overheard from an open window Leslie Ullman Winner of the Yale Younger Poets Award and the Iowa Poetry Prize Levering s COLTRANE S GOD is a hip historical collection of flatted thirds and sevenths full of those characteristic jazzy blue notes poems sung as if through saxophone and smoke Levering has an ear and eye for jazz and what he writes here is part history part song following a lineage of jazz poets including Hughes Kerouac Baraka Carruth Harper and Mackey Kevin Rabas Author of Bird s Horn Coal City Review Press 2007 COLTRANE S GOD is an informative highly original and insightful collection of poems and a fitting testament to Levering s passion for music in its manifestations as the purest voice of the human soul His allusions are both exhaustive and spot on from Beethoven and Telemann to The Beatles and Chuck Berry from Schubert and Tchaikovsky to Robert Johnson and Bill Monroe The sounds of the natural world are also celebrated Levering writes of whale song cricket chirp bat click swallow titter and the trilling of the red winged blackbird Levering s mellifluous diction is the verbal equivalent of Coltrane s sheets of sound COLTRANE S GOD is a stunning poetic achievement Larry D Thomas Member Texas Institute of Letters 2008 Texas Poet Laureate Previous Lives Donald Levering, 2018 Poetry Donald Levering s PREVIOUS LIVES NEW AND SELECTED EARLY POEMS cherry picks poems from this widely published poet s 40 year career Arranged to flow thematically rather than chronologically selections from his first eight books are interspersed with previously uncollected poems in 98 pages The book showcases Levering s broad stylistic range Free verse partners with pantoum ghazal and blank verse Tight imagist gems nest beside Whitmanesque declamatory odes The title is at play where the speaker portrays various lives a snow plow driver a highway surveyor a man who steals subway trains a prisoner in a Borges story a stroke afflicted astrologer a Navajo healer a kachina doll salesman Humorous paeans to Roethke Bly and Freud lend levity to a text that witnesses estrangement and war Ravens plants and fungi are also featured in this former groundskeeper's retrospective      Any Song Will Do Donald Levering, 2019-09-10 Poetry The subjects of Levering's poems are as intriguingly variegated as the musicality of his assured poetic diction In poem after poem he reveals the extraordinary essence of seemingly ordinary phenomena Even the common chemical element copper in Levering's laserlike gaze unclasps its rings from our magnets and limbs and climbs back inside mountains These poems are paeans as much to the beauties and fragilities of the natural world as to the pleasure and pain of the human Like the protagonist of his brilliant poem St Francis of Assisi Levering is at one with the world where he lives flush with love of God and animals Larry D Thomas      Who's who in Writers, Editors & Poets, United States & Canada ,1989      Who's who in U.S. Writers, Editors & Poets ,1989

Transmissions from Bone House Stephen Bunch, 2016-08-31 When I read the poems in Stephen Bunch's new book Transmissions from Bone House especially late at night it's like listening to a pirate radio station Unlicensed and unregulated his voice comes to me on a frequency all its own that simply can't be found elsewhere on my dial The air fills with signals and wonders and receiving him I think I know him I for one am staying tuned William Slaughter editor of Mudlark An Electronic Journal of Poetry and Poetics author of Untold Stories and The Politics of My Heart Inside the Bone House nouns break down verbs evaporate and we enter a parallel reality Bunch casually reveals one sun at a time one whisper from where the glacier stopped moving millennia ago What is real and what is not In this collection of sparse yet rich poetry everything is real We experience the intersection of two worlds slipping into that second world where memories twine in next year's bean vines and we find ourselves deftly delivered into a setting where angels live under wallpaper Sherry O Keefe author of Cracking Geodes Open poetry editor of IthacaLit In the poem Data Stephen Bunch writes Like speech balloons in comics words and their products have moved into a cloud The poet takes tropes of previous literary ages and destabilizes them to address digital age environments No sonnets here but many lyrics that function like sonnets and odes The ironies are not contrived but rather intrinsic to daily outrages like the beginning of Crawlspace In the newspaper today Paranoia on the rise Bunch a master poet challenges readers to stay alert No sleepwalking through his Transmissions from Bone House Each page contains quiet explosions Denise Low 2007 9 Kansas Poet Laureate author of Melange Block and Jackalope The poems in this book create a paradoxical universe where reductionism generates expansive vision and despair works its way into humor The poet makes this happen through his vision and command of the mutability of language and his view of the unreliability of perception and the mutability of story lines that we often cling to Donald Levering author of The Water Leveling with Us and Coltrane's God      Songs for My Father Kevin Rabas, 2016-04-22 From Eat Fast My father who brought home good money from his job at the site kept us well fed told us to get desk jobs urged us to study up fattened lost his mind slumped in blue

TV light Retired he tried keeping bees keeping chickens growing tomatoes collecting antique crocks But in the end he ate chips His face placid the light left his eyes irises two blue tubes He walked slow His speech slurred He'd shake your hand and say he loved you But nothing nothing held There is something of the kernel of reminiscence in Kevin Rabas's work a sense that for all its artfulness the poems are the purest distillation of memory and feeling At its heart this collection pays homage not just to a particular feisty father but to all fathers that we love in their peculiarities and imperfections The writing is deft and observant with an understated humor and warmth At the same time it is a celebration of the lick and needle of fire song that is to the making of music Through Rabas's words we are welcomed to an insider's view of a drummer's realm where we learn of the timekeeper's measured ticks and splintered drumsticks Donald Levering author of Coltrane's God Kevin Rabas creates poems and stories that lay bare the soul of this poet musician husband father and son His words are visceral and true deeply personal and ultimately universal Songs for My Father is his bravest collection to date as he explores the complex occasionally contentious but always loving relationship between father and son Rabas's poems hum with the spirit and tempo you would expect from this noted jazz drummer If you have a father or you are a music lover or you quest after the truth you will savor Rabas's latest offering Michael D Graves author of To Leave a Shadow
