Dictionary of Natural Products, 1996. Containing fully authenticated data on virtually all known natural products, the Dictionary of Natural Products main work published in 1993 was the end result of over 12 years' compilation and editing by a large team of contributors. The resulting Dictionary contains 100 000 natural products and their derivatives organized into approximately 35 000 entries. Volume 9 of the Dictionary contains the result of a thorough review of the natural product literature for the year 1992, 3 the results of which are presented as a mixture of new entries and updated entries containing modified information. The following categories of natural products are covered: amino acids, peptides and proteins, carbohydrates, nucleosides and nucleotides, lipids, antibiotics, alkaloids, steroids and terpenoids, flavonoids, lignans, lichen acids, coumarins, polyacetylenes, polypyrroles, semiochemicals and other miscellaneous aliphatic compounds and all other classes of miscellaneous metabolites. A particular feature of the Dictionary is the care which has been taken to draw and check the structure diagrams to ensure their accuracy and consistency and to present the data within entries in a logical manner which reconciles as far as possible inconsistencies and inaccuracies in the literature as determined by the subject editors. Careful attention has also been taken with nomenclature to ensure user friendly access to all of the data. All of the contents are fully indexed by name, molecular formula, Chemical Abstracts Service CAS Registry Number and species from which isolated. An additional unique feature is the type of compound classification scheme which has been evolved for this Dictionary to list all natural products under one or more headings, bringing closely related compounds together under one index heading. Extensive references, labelled to show their content, are listed for each entry, allowing rapid location of data of a particular type, e.g. spectroscopic information. The Dictionary of Natural Products is a reference source on natural products with Volume 9, the second supplementary volume, a useful addition to keep the Dictionary up to date. Studies in Natural Products Chemistry Atta-ur Rahman, 2020-02-18

Studies in Natural Products Chemistry Volume 64 covers the rapid developments in spectroscopic techniques and accompanying advances in high throughput screening techniques that have made it possible to rapidly isolate and determine the structures and biological activity of natural products The book highlights these new and exciting opportunities in the field of new drug development to the pharmaceutical industry As natural products in the plant and animal kingdom offer a huge diversity of chemical structures that are the result of biosynthetic processes that have been modulated over the millennia through genetic effects this book is an ideal resource on the material presented Focuses on the chemistry of bioactive natural products Contains contributions by leading authorities in the field Presents sources of new pharmacophores
