*by Anita Berber and Sebastian Droste

Introduction

Weimar Germany was a virtually unparalleled period of social and cultural upheaval, as well as a time at which the impossible briefly seemed about to be realized. By the end of World War One, there was intense disillusionment across Europe with the civilization that had led to war. The ugliness and impersonality of protracted trench combat not only disappointed the heroic dreams shared by patriots on every side, but also led artists and intellectuals to question the system of values responsible for the carnage. In the Anglo-American context, such poets as Wilfred Owen and Siegfried Sassoon called out bitterly against the lies that led to mass slaughter; other poets, like Ezra Pound and T. S. Eliot, anatomized the moribund condition of modern culture. At various Continental urban centers, abrasive and radically innovative forms of art, under the umbrella nonsense-term, "Dada," expressed a parallel, if less nostalgic, revulsion toward the cultural status-quo. Berlin, the one-time capital of imperial Germany, arguably became the epicenter of artistic disenchantment, the ground-zero of post-war modernity. For Germany had been the war's great loser: not only did the nation suffer an opprobrious defeat, not only was the Kaiser forced to abdicate and flee, but a communist revolution—the Spartacist Revolt—almost succeeded in wiping away the entirety of the old order. The disrespected Weimar Republic, disliked even by its founders, was a weak compromise formation that pleased almost no one. To make matters worse, the unworkably harsh reparations demands made by France and Great Britain utterly undermined in the early 1920s what little social stability the Weimar Republic had been able to achieve.

In Weimar's early years, Germany was a society adrift, come completely unmoored. When a loaf of bread could cost as much as four billion Marks, the attempt to pay reparations having debased the currency, people starved. Murder and violence were rampant, including sexual murder, or Lustmord, which became Weimar's tabloid sensation. Women from once-respectable families could be seen selling themselves, their daughters, and even their sons on the streets of Berlin. It is partly for this reason, but also with the help of such travel writers as Christopher Isherwood and W. H. Auden, that our cultural imaginary in the English-speaking world has made Weimar Berlin the epitome of modern decadence. With the word, "Weimar," images of cabaret, cross-dressers, and public prostitution come readily to mind. Indeed, there has been for decades an unfortunate and homophobic tendency to blame Weimar debauchery for the Nazi terror that followed it. Of all Weimar artists, perhaps none more than Anita Berber and Sebastian Droste exploited the bizarre cultural situation, including its fascination with Lustmord. Berber herself, Castello, Carla Scilabra, 2020-10-15 The collected essays in this volume focus on the presentation representation and interpretation of ancient violence from war to slavery rape and murder in the modern visual and performing arts with special attention to videogames and dance as well as the more usual media of film literature and theatre Violence fury and the dread that they provoke are factors that appear frequently in the ancient sources The dark side of antiquity so distant from the ideal of purity and harmony that the classical heritage until recently usually called forth has repeatedly struck the imagination of artists writers and scholars across ages and cultures A global assembly of contributors from Europe to Brazil and from the US to New Zealand consider historical and mythical violence in Stanley Kubrick's Spartacus and the 2010 TV series of the same name in Ridley Scott's Gladiator in the work of Lars von Trier and in Soviet ballet and the choreography of Martha Graham and Anita Berber Representations of Roman warfare appear in videogames such as Ryse Son of Rome and Total War as well as recent comics and examples from both these media are analysed in the volume Finally interviews with two artists offer insight into the ways in which practitioners understand and engage with the complex reception of these themes Dancing in the Blood Edward Ross Dickinson, 2017-07-27 The book explores the revolutionary impact of modern dance on European culture in the early twentieth century Edward Ross Dickinson uncovers modern dance's place in the emerging mass culture of the modern metropolis and reveals the connections between dance politics culture religion the arts psychology entertainment and selfhood The Queer German Cinema Alice A. Rilke or Rainer Maria Rilke's thing poems Because dolls occupy a liminal space not quite things and more than mere objects they appear as uncanny creatures which have held a fascination for writers thinkers and artists alike Uncanny Creatures moves past the Freudian discourse of fetishism to propose a new reading of doll artifacts in German culture centered on their ability to evoke a feeling of uncertainty and unsettlement in the viewer Rebel Rebel Chris Sullivan, 2019-04-08 Thirty four essays and interviews with some of the greatest individuals malcontents and free thinkers of the last 150 years including Louise Brooks Richard Pryor David Bowie Liam Gallagher and Daniel Day Lewis this is a collection that exonerates the maverick and celebrates the individual It is an essential read for the left of field Queering the Canon Christoph Lorey, John L. Plews, 1998 This collection of essays exposes points of queerness marginality and alterity present in the German canon and introduces further deviation from traditional German literature and culture in the form of openly lesbian and gay works It provides new queer analyses of texts by canonical authors such as Goethe Schiller Thomas and Klaus Mann Ingeborg Bachmann Christa Reinig and Elfriede Jelinek yet discusses works that have seldom received scholarly attention It also breaks the traditional limitation of Germanistik to the study of literature by including essays on aspects of German culture such as music film fine art and art history and politics and law
