Climate Change Denial and Public Relations Núria Almiron, Jordi Xifra, 2019-06-26 This is the first book on climate change denial and lobbying that combines the ideology of denial and the role of anthropocentrism in the study of interest groups and communication strategy Climate Change Denial and Public Relations Strategic Communication and Interest Groups in Climate Inaction is a critical approach to climate change denial from a strategic communication perspective The book aims to provide an in depth analysis of how strategic communication by interest groups is contributing to climate change inaction. It does this from a multidisciplinary perspective that expands the usual approach of climate change denialism and introduces a critical reflection on the roots of the problem including the ethics of the denialist ideology and the rhetoric and role of climate change advocacy. Topics addressed include the power of persuasive narratives and discourses constructed to support climate inaction by lobbies and think tanks, the dominant human supremacist view and the patriarchal roots of denialists and advocates of climate change, like the knowledge coalitions of the climate think tank networks, the denial strategies related to climate change of the nuclear oil and agri-food lobbies, the role of public relations firms, the anthropocentric roots of public relations, taboo topics such as human overpopulation and meat eating and the technological myth. This unique volume is recommended reading for students and scholars of communication and public relations.

The book covers topics such as how people perceive and respond to climate change, how people understand and communicate about the issue, how it impacts individuals and communities, particularly vulnerable communities, and how individuals and communities can best prepare for and mitigate negative climate change impacts. It addresses the topic at multiple scales, from individuals to close social networks and communities. Further, it considers the role of social diversity in shaping vulnerability and reactions to climate change. Psychology and Climate Change describes the implications of psychological processes such as perceptions and motivations, e.g., risk perception, motivated cognition, denial, emotional responses, group identities, mental health and well-being, sense of place and behavior, mitigation and adaptation. The book strives to engage diverse stakeholders from multiple disciplines in addition to psychology and at every level of decision making: individual, community, national and international, to understand the ways in which human capabilities and tendencies can and should shape policy and action to address the urgent and very real issue of climate change. Examines the role of knowledge, norms, experience and social context in climate change awareness and action. Considers the role of identity threat, identity based motivation and belonging. Presents a conceptual framework for classifying individual and household behavior. Develops a model to explain environmentally sustainable behavior. Draws on what we know about participation in collective action. Describes ways to improve the effectiveness of climate change communication efforts. Discusses the difference between acute climate change events and slowly emerging changes on our mental health.
